ROAD AUDIT ATTEMPT FAILS

Army's Air Fleet Passes Over Hope On Hop to Dayton

20 to 30 Planes Rumble Across Sky Here Wednesday Morning

FLY IN FORMATION

Squadron From Texas Bound for War Games in East

The rumble of 8,000 to 10,000 horsepower resounding from the sky caused the population of Hope to look upward at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning—just in time to see one of Uncle Sam's mighty air squadrons winging its way eastward to the war games to be held this week at Dayton, Ohio.

There were 20 to 30 planes in the squadron which followed the Missouri Pacific tracks over Hope to the East. The Star counted 21, but one flight had already gone over.

Ships Moving Fast

The big military ships were flying very high, in a series of V formations, and moving fast. They passed over the local horizon in about two minutes.

The squadron was probably from San Antonio, Texas, one of the chief aviation centers of the country, and the home of the new "West Point of the Air."

According to Associated Press dispatches more than 650 planes of the Army Air Corps are on their way to Dayton Tuesday for a concentrated defense of industrial centers of the East and Middle West. This is a part in the air at one time, in maneuvers designed to be a practice game by means of an attack from a future enemy.

The air campaign is to begin Friday, May 15, the aviators inspecting maps of the territory they are to cover, and their flights being checked by umpires who will determine the probable effect of their dud bombs and gunfire.

The army expects to have 672 planes in the air at one time, in maneuvers around Chicago, Detroit, and then New York.

The Arkansas National Guard will send five ships to Dayton Friday.

Another From Oklahoma

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—With Lieut. George Percifull of Lonoke, former Arkansas high school athlete, leading, a group of 14 planes of the 88th Observation Squadron from Fort Sill, Okla., arrived here Wednesday en route to the army air maneuvers at Dayton, Ohio. The squadron, consisting of 24 officers and men, will remain here overnight.

4 Million Can Be Mobilized in War

General MacArthur Tells Commission of Selective Draft

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—War department plans for instant mobilization of 4,000,000 men were outlined before the War Policies Commission Wednesday by General Douglas MacArthur, latest immediately after receipt of a protest from the Federal Council of Churches that elaborate war preparations would diminish national security.

MacArthur, appearing at the commission's resumption of hearings to find a method to take the profit out of war, explained that War department plans called for the mobilization of an army of 4,000,000 under selective draft from a registration on roll of 11,000,000.

Chinese Ban Western Dancing as Immoral

PEIPING.—(AP)—Chinese officials in Hupch province, of which Hankow is the principal city, have been forbidden to indulge in western dances, according to an official order. The order states western dancing is immoral.

Chinese officials in Peiping hope the order will not serve as a model here. Western dances have become very popular here, and several dance-halls have opened with Chinese girls as dancing partners. Officials are eager patrons of these night clubs.

City To Take Up Armory Proposal

Special Session of Council Will Hear Details of State Offer

The City of Hope will receive its first official notice of plans for a new National Guard armory here, when Mayor John Vesey calls the city council into special session at the city hall Wednesday night.

The mayor announced the special session call Tuesday in response to petitions from the civic groups of Hope asking for early consideration of the armory project.

No Advance Opinion
None of the city officials has indicated what course will be pursued when the council meets.

The problems to be surmounted are the selection of two lots which will meet government requirements, including minimum dimensions of 100 by 150 feet, and the acquiring of title by the city.

Under the terms of the proposal made public by the state adjutant general's office in Little Rock, an appropriation of $25,000 is available for the building, if Hope buys the property site.

Endorsed By Many
The matter was brought to the attention of the American Legion local post, which endorsed the project, followed by endorsements from the Legion Auxiliary, the Rotary, Kiwanis and Business & Professional Women's club, and Hope Chamber of Commerce.

Petitions offered to the mayor suggested that one member from each organization and the local guard company would be willing to serve with a committee from the city council in selecting a suitable location for the armory, if the council takes favorable action Wednesday night.

Cactus Cattle Fodder Succeeds in Mexico

JUAREZ, Mex.—(AP)—Cactus for cattle food is the latest project of the Mexican department of agriculture. Department bulletins received here indicate that experiments in feeding the cactus to cattle in arid regions has proved successful.

The cactus is cut from the parent stalk and the thorns removed by bruising with gasoline. The department says the food value is particularly great for range cattle and that it will supplement needs for water to a large extent.

Rhode Island Tries Salmon Experiment

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—(AP)—To date, about the only kind of salmon Rhode Islanders have known is that which comes in a can.
But experiments now in progress under direction of Roland P. Bowen, youthful superintendent of the Wickford fish hatchery, may prove that salmon-raising is practicable in the nation's smallest state.

Approximately 1,000 baby salmon lie in wooden tanks at the hatchery while Bowen observes their day-by-day development. If the salmon continue to thrive, they will be distributed later in lakes and ponds.

Tax Collector To Close Office For 3 Days Next Week

Sheriff-Collector Wil's on Asks Time to Prepare Land List

OPENS AGAIN THE 21st

Office Force Will Be Busy With Records 18th, 19th and 20th

The collector's office at the courthouse in Washington will be closed next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, in order to give the office force time to prepare the delinquent land list for publication. Sheriff John L. Wilson announced Wednesday noon.

"Tell the taxpayers of Hempstead county who have not yet made settlement, to refrain from visiting the collector's office the first half of next week," the sheriff-collector said. "We will need all three days to finish compiling and checking the delinquent tax list and get it into publication in time specified by law before the land sale June 8. The collector's office will be closed May 18-19-20, but will be open again for business Thursday, May 21."

Sheriff Wilson said tax collections were coming on "fairly good," and they are understood to be better than was expected early this spring.

Light Measurer Dies at Age of 78

Albert A. Michaelson Most Distinguished Scientist Today

PASADENA, Calif.—(AP)—Death will not thwart "the last great experiment" of Dr. Albert A. Michaelson, famous physicist, who died here Saturday.

The ambitious project, which he undertook as his crowning achievement in science will be carried on by two of his former colleagues, Dr. Francis G. Pease and Dr. Seth B. Nicholson.

Michaelson took to his bed after building the longest vacuum tube in the world, a mile stretch of pipe at the Irvine ranch, some 40 miles from here, near Santa Ana, Calif. It serves in one of the most fascinating and exacting experiments in science, the clocking of the fastest thing known—the velocity of light.

A frail little man of indomitable will, the 78-year-old scientist had a far-away look in his eyes as he finally saw his vacuum tube completed and the experiment started.

"Last Great Experiment."
"It is my last great experiment," he told Dr. Albert Einstein, famed German physicist, who sat with him on an army cot in the little experimental headquarters shack.

That was in February. It was but a few days later that he went to his bed in Pasadena. After weeks of diminishing strength, creeping paralysis set in.

Dr. Einstein declared on his visit here that Michaelson's work had given him the conception of the theory of relativity. All astronomical measurement of today, together with a large part of the basis of all modern experimental physics, has a part of its foundation in Michaelson's determination of the speed of light.

He was past 70 years when, by using revolving mirrors on Mount Wilson and San Antonio Peak, 28 miles apart, he measured the velocity of light as 186,213 miles a second. He previously had measured it at 186,173 miles per second.

Then he decided that there might still be a slight error of a few miles or so, and the most elaborate physical experiment of its kind was set up by him with the cooperation of the Carnegie institution. This is the Irvine ranch test.

The precise results of the experiment will not be known until midsummer, owing to the exhaustive supplementary tests involved.

Oil Turns to Water But Aids Stockholders

LOS ANGELES.—(AP)—Stockholders in a wildcat oil project near here were rather disappointed when drillers struck only a heavy flow of water, but instead of oil, they now have two products of far more value, they have been informed.

First, the water was discovered to be of a high mineral content, radioactive, and with a ready market in the city which sells millions of gallons of bottled water daily.

Then examination of the gas liberated by the well disclosed a small percentage of helium present, and work is under way to develop and isolate this rare, non-inflammable gas, used in dirigibles, and previously found only in Texas.

In business life Mr. Brooks is head of the S. M. Brooks Advertising Agency, an organization which has attained national recognition.

The district Rotary conference at Hot Springs was attended by a delegation from Hope, some of whom drove to the resort city Monday night, the others following early Tuesday. Among those attending from Hope were:

Judge Throws Out Nebraska Charges

The Perjury Indictment Against Sen Norris' Opponent Is Suppressed

LINCOLN, Neb.—(AP)—Federal Judge T. C. Munger sustained demurrers to perjury indictments against George W. Norris, former Nebraska governor, and Victor Seymour, former Republican leader in the state, in a court decision Wednesday.

Norris and Seymour challenged the constitutional authority of the senate campaign funds investigating committee to investigate last year's Nebraska primary election campaign.

Norris entered the Republican primary as an opponent of Senator George W. Norris, but his name was later ruled off the ballot by the state supreme court on the ground that it was not filed in time.

School Election

Saturday, May 16

Districts numbered 18, 20, 23, 33, 37, 44, 49, 50, 51, 55, 56, 57, 61, 62, 67, 70, 71, 77, 78, 81 and 82 are to elect six directors; two for one year term, two for two years and two for three years. It should be definitely understood before voting begins, the length of term each candidate may have. Unless this is done a man's name may be voted for more than one place and the judges may not know just what to do in certifying returns. Rural Special and Special districts elect two directors (districts having more than six directors are to elect six directors).

After the hours for voting have passed the judges are to count the ballots and determine the results of the voting of the day. Clerks keep record of this and sign proper places.

The judges certify the results of the election to the County Board of Education. One of the judges is to deliver the returns without delay after election to the office of the County Board of Education.

If, for any reason, the necessary supplies for holding the election do not reach the secretary of the local board by Thursday night, May 14, a telephone call to the County Superintendent and supplies furnished.

Stuttgart Miller Believed Lost in Dive From Bluff

Automobile and Man Vanish on Cliff Over White River

Companion Leaves For Aid—Finds Man and Car Gone

STUTTGART.—(AP)—A. U. McGill, 40, prominent rice miller, was missing Wednesday after his automobile plunged over a high bluff into White river near here.

The car, with its doors closed, was recovered from the river.

Guy Crockett, rice buyer of Stuttgart, who went to Clarendon with McGill Tuesday, reported he left McGill in the car parked near the bluff when it developed engine trouble. Crockett went to a ferry crossing nearby shortly after midnight.

When he returned, Crockett said the car and McGill were gone, with the car's tracks leading to the bluff. McGill's hat was found at the scene. McGill and a brother, H. C. McGill, operate a rice mill here.

White Paper May Be Made in South

Slash Pine Believed Useful Despite Resin Content

WASHINGTON.—(Arkansas Gazette)—Experiments conducted at the forest products laboratory of the United States Department of Agriculture at Madison, Wis., promise to revolutionize the pulp-wood and paper making industry, and shift the center of western hemisphere operations from New England and Canada to the Southern United States.

So enthusiastic are some of the leaders of industrial chemistry over the Department of Agriculture tests, that they are visioning a vast new source of revenue for Texas, Arkansas and the other states of the Southern pine belt.

As a result of the experiments, spokesmen for the paper making industry predict, millions of acres of cutover timber lands in the South soon may be devoted profitably to the growing of pine for use as pulp wood.

Slash pine, loblolly pine and the short and long leaf pine used extensively in the Southern lumber industry long have been held valueless for paper making, due to their high resin content. But the significant fact was overlooked that the resin content of these trees is found almost exclusively in the heart wood.

Paper of excellent grade manufactured from sap wood of Southern pine was exhibited at the Exposition of Chemical Industries in New York City May 6. Charles A. Herty of New York city, who was in charge of the exhibit, was enthusiastic in describing its significance. The paper, along with other products of Southern pine, was manufactured at the Madison (Wis.) government laboratory. The ordinary sulphite process was used.

The heart wood of slash pine, loblolly pine, and Southern short and long leaf pines contains a large amount of resin," Dr. Herty said, "and therefore is impractical for the sulphite process of making pulp. But the heart wood does not appear until the tree is 25 years old. When it is under that age it contains no more than one and three-tenths per cent resin, as compared with three-fourths of one per cent for Canadian spruce, a difference that is negligible.

"There are at present 150,000,000 acres in the South, selling from $5 to $10 per acre, upon which these trees could be grown. Hundreds of thousands of acres of abandoned farm lands could be converted in 10 years to forests of stout pines that could be sold at a profit at $6 per cord, as compared with $18 per cord for New England and Canadian pulp-wood or spruce imported from Russia and the

Negro Students Show In Domestic Science

A domestic science and art display of 128 students in the Shover Street Negro School was on display early this week at Patterson's Department Store, Elm and Divisions streets. The exhibit included excellent specimens of sewing on cotton and silk dresses, other articles of clothing, and displays of painting and baking by the negro students of the city.

Cotton Barge Line Is Planned in Arkansas

ST. LOUIS.—The various barge lines now in operation on the rivers find a very good business in transporting cotton to Memphis and New Orleans for export. The rich Red River country, the Ouachita River and its tributaries, the Cumberland River, to mention only three, produce annually many thousands of bales of cotton which move to market by rail or by rail and water.

A much larger proportion of this annual cotton business will naturally go to the rivers when barges begin running on the proposed improved channel of the Arkansas River from Tulsa, Oklahoma to that river's confluence with the Mississippi. This fact is indicated in a comprehensive report compiled recently for the Mississippi Valley Association by Theodore Brent, traffic expert of New Orleans.

Steamboats and barges are first-rate cotton. Long experience has proved this. The early flatbottomed little Western River steamboat of a type made familiar by old prints and magazines was entirely responsible for building up that enormous cotton trade in the lower Mississippi Valley which, as long ago as pre Civil War times, put the South on its feet commercially.

Later, came the big palatial steamboats in the seventies, eighties, and nineties—flatbottomed, like their predecessors. Famous old steamboats whose names are written in gold in the history of the Mississippi River, were noted as cotton carriers. The Robert E. Lee carried 5,000 bales. The J. M. White 6,000. The Grand Republic 7,000. The old sternwheel Henry Frank, a long lanky grayhound of a boat, astounded the world one time when she came booming down to New Orleans with 9,226 bales of cotton on board in addition to other freight and passengers.

No other craft than a flatbottom river vessel could have served the old-time cotton trade so efficiently. The old steamboats could nose into bank at any place along the Mississippi shore, push their snub noses up to the landings of the various cotton planters, load the cotton, and take it on to market.

In these days of improved river terminals and concentration points where farmers and manufacturers may bring their shipments to be loaded into barges, it is not necessary for boats to run into bank at each planter or farm. A single modern barge two like those moving on the rivers today can carry as many as 60,000 bales of cotton.

Combining the advantages of modern barge tows and the advantage also of modern methods of loading, shipping and consigning, which the old steamboats did not have, it is likely that history will repeat itself on the Lower Mississippi and that a great river commerce in cotton will develop to the benefit of cotton producers as well as manufacturers and ultimate consumers.

Audit Body Says It Is Impossible Under Act of 1931

Audit Commission Notifies Governor It Will Not Proceed

AUDIT WAS PLEDGE

1931 Act Passed by Legislature to Replace Faulty Bill of 1929

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Asserting that the 1931 audit act restricted the Highway Audit Commission to "examination of records" and gave it no authority to make "a fair, complete, and thorough" audit, the commission Wednesday notified Governor Parnell it had adjourned and would consider no further audit of the State Highway Department for the present.

Law Apparently Fails

Act No. 66 of 1931 was adopted by the legislature following the refusal of certified public accountants to permit any of their members to participate in an audit under the provisions of the law of 1929. This act attempted to provide for a continuous audit under the supervision of the state comptroller, but was denounced by professional accountants as virtually prohibiting an impartial examination of highway department finance.

The act of 1931 was passed ostensibly with the view of correcting the fault in the 1929 law.

One of Governor Parnell's campaign promises last summer was a thorough, impartial audit of highway department finances.

A member of the Highway Audit Commission, Harry J. Lemley, well known Hope attorney, others are: Chancellor J. M. Kuttell, of Paris; Gould, chairman; Judge S. M. Bone of Batesville, a noted leader in the fight for passage of the Harrellson road law in 1923; R. A. Cook, of Little Rock; and V. W. St. John, editor of the Mena Star.

Booklet Explains War on Furniture Moths

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The troublesome little moth that leaves behind its trail many small holes in furniture, especially that finished in mahogany, can be halted if the housewife makes a fortnightly inspection, says Clark B. Kelsey in a booklet published by the National Committee on Wood Utilization.

The booklet, "Furniture, Its Selection and Use," says the home owner ought to inspect furniture at least once a fortnight, brushing it briskly with a stiff brush. This is explained, crushes the egg of the moth that are laid in various parts of the furniture.

The Grim Lesson of Spain

THE front page of this newspaper has told some harrowing stories from Madrid the last two days.

Monday a Spanish mob pulled down the headquarters building of the Jesuit Order and burned it. Up to Tuesday night a total of 21 Catholic churches had been destroyed. In the face of this frenzied anti-church demonstration the new republican government appears powerless.

History is being performed before our very eyes—the last chapter of a tragic church in a tragic kingdom. To American eyes it seemed inevitable. We always imagined it was inevitable that some time or other the Spanish people would rise and overthrow both their monarchy and established church.

Anglo-Saxon Protestants are touchy on the subject of Spain. Our forefathers, possibly you remember, had numerous and bloody engagements with the gentlemen from Spain centuries ago when America was a wilderness and Spanish galleons patrolled the Atlantic coast.

But the true tragedy of Spain is not that part which we perceive. Our own feelings enter into it too much. The real tragedy lies in the fact that any church should become so closely allied with any government that a political collapse should cause the name of God to be blasphemed and his temples desecrated.

This is the oldest story in the history of the world, true of all nations and all churches—a tragedy that dates back to the beginning of time. Priests forsook their people to sit in the high councils of Babylon, and when the enemy conquered Babylon they threw out the gods along with the kings. Alfonso, the last king of Spain, came of a long line of monarchs backed by a church. It began when the church helped the king. It ended with the king trying to save the church.

Wisely ingrained in the nature of the American people is their separation of church from the politics of state. Our democracy does not put its religion and its government in the same basket. Governments may come and go. But as long as faith and a contrite spirit remain, the nation lives.

Speed and Disease

A ROOM in one of the largest hospitals of a middle-western American city has been placed under quarantine because it contains a patient suffering with a rare but deadly oriental disease; and while the news may not seem especially remarkable it does point to a new problem with which the recent improvement in human communications has presented the world.

The victim, in this case, is a returned traveler who fell ill, in America, of distomiasis, a disease contracted in the interior of Korea and heretofore practically unheard-of in this country. Specialists in oriental diseases, at the Johns Hopkins and Tulane Universities, would like to examine the sufferer; but distomiasis is highly communicable, and he cannot be moved for fear of spreading the infection.

Usually we take it for granted that faster transportation between nation and nation is an unalloyed boon. Men can get from America to China now in a fortnight (or possibly less,) whereas the trip used to take three months or more. A triumph over space? A magnificent time-saver? Undoubtedly; but also a new problem that will keep wise men furrowing their brows for another century.

For if men can make the journey quickly and easily, so can disease germs. Pestilences heretofore confined to Siberian villages and Amazonian jungles can now appear in New York and Chicago. Germs that have remained in the world's backwaters can now emigrate and find new frontiers in America and Europe. Distomiasis, for example, can be a world-problem and not just one for Korea.

All of this is just one more reminder that no man, in this modern era, can live to himself. We have the whole world for our next-door neighbors now, and not just the inhabitants of our own country. Isolation between two broad oceans has ceased to mean anything.

Thus the health department of a city in the American interior has to worry over a malady heretofore confined to a small peninsula on the coast of Asia. Over-production in the rubber factories of Akron can mean starvation to native workers in the Malay peninsula. The starting of cotton textile factories by the Nationalists of India can ruin an industry in Great Britain. The meat exports of the Argentine can spell hard times to cattle raisers in Wyoming. Farmers in the American wheat belt are suffering because Europe's peasants are raising bigger crops than they did a decade ago.

So it goes. Flung a stone at a native chief in mid-Africa and you are apt to knock the plug hat from the head of an industrialist in Detroit. There are no "purely local" problems any more. Every event has international consequences.

Prices Not the Only Things Being 'Pegged' in the Farm Belt!

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—One thing about Hoover commissions is that they don't get out of hand. They remain Hoover commissions to the end.

The history of the Woods unemployment committee, appointed in connection with the great problem of joblessness, has been somewhat analogous to that of the Wickham commission, created primarily as a means of dealing with the troublesome prohibition issue.

Mr. Hoover's enemies are found clanking that both were established only as political smokecreens and that the president subsequently undertook to manipulate them for political purposes.

Mr. Hoover's friends reply that only a man's enemies would say things like that.

But it's a fact that both committees did some good work and that the president's choice of personnel is conceded to have been admirable. In each case, however, a chairman was picked who could be depended upon not to embarrass the administration.

Chairman George W. Wickham, in constant contact with the White House, managed to bring out a "dry" set of recommendations from his commission despite the decision of seven of 11 members that prohibition was a flop.

Woods, Dissatisfied, Quits

Chairman Arthur Woods of the unemployment committee kept on doing his best without a murmur until he felt forced to resign because, with his powers restricted at the outset, his data was suppressed and his recommendations ignored. Six other officers of the committee stepped out at the same time, indicating the more or less general dissatisfaction which existed. But it was all very quiet and orderly and no one accompanied his withdrawal with any cracks at the administration.

Nevertheless, the bitterness which seethed within the Wickham commission at what was termed White House interference was duplicated in the ranks of the unemployment committee and its staff.

The unemployment group consisted mainly of experts in their line who insisted that something ought to be done about unemployment by the federal government besides exhorting everyone else to do something about it. It is understood that Woods, who takes the unemployment problem quite seriously, was anxious to resign last December, oppressed by a feeling of futility.

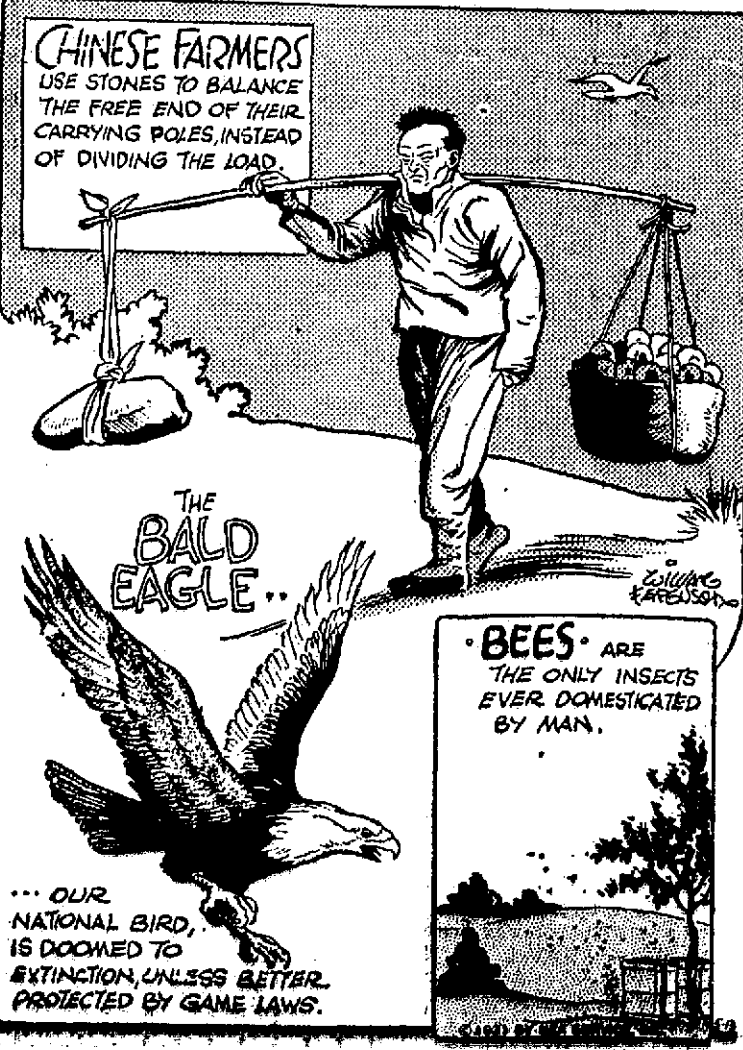

Early this year a member of the committee attacked the administration's inaction before a small, select group at a private dinner in a Washington club. Woods himself is said to have assured members of the committee that although courtesy to the president demanded that they hold their tongues while still serving, there was no reason why they shouldn't speak their minds after retirement, using any information they had acquired here.

Side-Step Comparisons

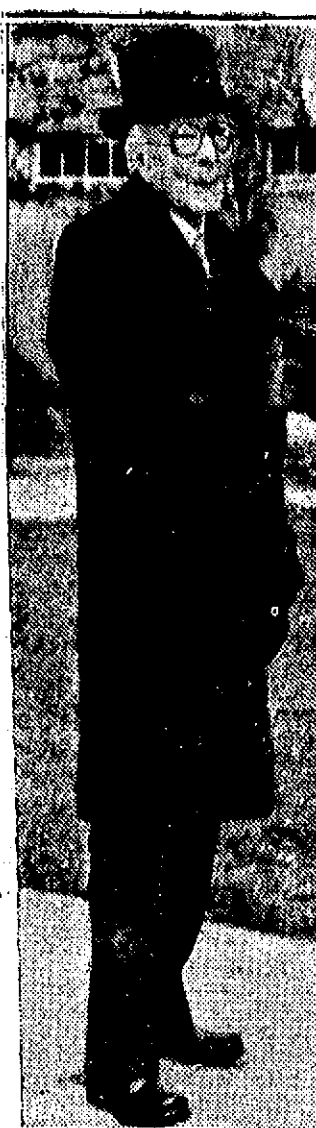

In the last few weeks all that was heard from Woods was occasional announcements of large sums being devoted to construction in the country. These were conspicuously unaccompanied by comparative figures for similar periods last year. The Department of Commerce's bureau of public construction had surveyed new government construction a few months ago and, despite all the hallelujahs there had been about that sort of thing as a federal effort to reduce unemployment, the result was withheld by White House order. The building permit figures for 297 cities for March showed an actual decrease of 11.3 per cent in construction as compared with March, 1930.

Woods is said to have recommended to the president a large federal appropriation for highway construction, the Wagner employment exchange bill which the president vetoed, a $40,000,000 army barracks repair program, bringing up to date the Agriculture Department's reforestation program and distribution of garden seed to miners and other unemployed persons. He also believed that the country should be permitted to know the seriousness of its unemployment situation.

HOW ONE WOMAN LOST 102 POUNDS OF FAT

Almost Unbelievable—Nevertheless True

Dear Friends: You advertise Kruschen Salts for reducing, so I finally tried them and when I started I weighed 219 pounds, 5 weeks, I lost exactly 102 pounds.

I am 23 years old and I look at least 5 years younger now than I did when I was fat. I have a picture of myself before and after so if you want to see them let me know.

I am always telling my friends about the wonderful salts. I am always advertising them.

I took 2 bottles every month for a year and 3 weeks. It amounted to $25 for reducing 102 pounds but it was worth it.

If I can be of any help to you let me know. Yours truly, Miss Nellie Simpson, 1903 Wayne Street, Swissvale, Pa., Oct. 31, 1930.

The Modern Safe Way—Right Way to Lose Fat

Just take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.

You can hasten the reducing action of Kruschen by going lighter on potatoes, pastry and fatty meats.

Unlike other Salts, Kruschen doesn't reduce by rushing food through your system. Rather it's an ideal blend of 6 separate mineral salts which help every gland, nerve and body organ to function properly.

Women everywhere are overjoyed with this marvelous reducing treatment. Frequently pound by pound of surplus fat leaves and soon you possess that trim, slender figure you've always craved.

An 85c bottle of Kruschen (last 4 weeks) is sold by leading druggists the world over—so start this SAFE method to lose ugly fat TODAY! Ward & Son or Briant's Drug Store. Adv.

Distance Star Assails "Staleness" Doctrine

SAN FRANCISCO.—(AP)—There is too much "staleness" in the training of distance runners, the authority of Emerson "Bud" Spencer who set the world's 400-meter mark in the 1928 Olympic meet. He is now track coach at the University of San Francisco.

The condition that passes for "Physical staleness" is entirely mental, he asserts and is due to boredom and monotony of the training grind.

As for the muscles, he says, they do not become stale, although if a runner over-exerts he becomes fatigued. A few hours' rest will cure this even in the most extreme cases.

Life is a gift to be used every day. Not to be smothered and hidden away; it isn't a thing to be stored in the chest. Where you gather your keepsakes and treasure your best; it isn't a joy to be sipped now and then. And promptly put back in a dark place again. Life is a gift that the humblest may boast of. And one that the humblest may well make the most of. Get out and live it each hour of the day. Wear it and use it as much as you may; Don't keep it in niches and corners and grooves. You'll find that in service its beauty improves. —E. A. G.

Box Angle
Wesley Ferrell pitched a no-hit no-run game against the Browns at Cleveland. The other day, an argument was started in the press box, and perhaps it may have to go down through the ages unsettled.

It was this. In the eighth inning, Wes had pitched a no-hit game. All the way, the Browns had been batting. Wes, catcher for the Browns, and brother of Wes, came to bat. Wes, Rick, batted a nice, clean base blow. Would the Browns' Brother Spots Ferrell's no-hit game with single in eighth be a better yarn than Ferrell's no-hit game?

There was no balloting, but the press box was about evenly divided on the subject.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—
AFTER Jess Harper, Notre Dame's returned athletic chief, was graduated by the University of Chicago he took a job selling atlases in Missouri. . . he is not a Catholic. . . Harper says that when they first asked him to come to Notre Dame years ago, the subject of religion was never brought up. . . and nothing was said about it when he was recalled recently. . . Even the umpires are getting slightly dizzy as honors pile up in the big leagues. . . the other day Chapman and Byrd contested for occupancy of third base. . . and the ump called the wrong man out. . . later in the same inning the same two players collided while chasing a fly ball.

So! Oh, Gosh!
Rick strode to the plate, took a healthy cut at the ball and a white streak went singing down past Third Baseman Johnny Burdett. It looked like a sure base hit. Then what seemed miraculous happened. Bill Hunnefeld, who had been behind the plate, lunged over the ball and came up with it. The throw was impossible from that position, but Hunnefeld made it right over his own left shoulder. It seemed, straight forward first base. Straight! Well, not quite, for Foner had to leave the bag to snare it.

Scorekeeper Ed Bang arose in his imperial majesty and spoke: "Error for 6! (the shortstop's number). The throw pulled Foner off the bag."

So it went down. Posterity may study the record of Bill Hunnefeld some day and wonder how he happened to make so many errors in 1931. One of those errors can be explained away. Hunnefeld was martyred to make a Ferrell holiday.

Prognosticator
SCOREKEEPER BANG, by the way, should be awarded a handsome set of handle-bar mustache dryers as a forecast. In the second inning of Ferrell's memorable game, Bang turned around to Kid Regan of the St.

much faster than Canadian spruce. Thus, the yield of red spruce at the age of 30 years, when it has attained sufficient size to be cut, is about two and one-fifth cords per acre; whereas the yield of slash pine at the same age is from 25 to 50 cords per acre. Slash pine from eight to ten years old attains about the same diameter as red spruce 30 years old.

Dr. Herly said that slash pine, which has been "completely wasted" thus far, "is one of the greatest assets of the South today." Enough of these trees could be raised in the South,

She has been in love with Tommy Wilson, a boy who has been in love with her. She has been in love with Tommy Wilson, a boy who has been in love with her.

"Well," the postman pressed. "Tell me quick. I've got a heavy load this morning."

Beryl was dancing around in circles, saying the letter over her head.

"Oh, Johnny, it's great!" she cried. "I'm . . ."

"Irene bridled. 'Hm,' she snorted in disgust. 'If you're so sick it's funny you wouldn't have a doctor. I don't believe there's anything the matter with you.'"

Irene was incensed because she had to wash dishes for two days and her father had dared to insist that she help at the store.

For once Beryl's mother took her part. "Well, she must be sick when she can't eat," she said. "Beryl's always had a healthy appetite and she's no call to reduce."

"She's stalling," Irene sneered. "For heaven's sake, stop talking about me!" Beryl exclaimed. Irene was hitting too near the mark for comfort. Not that she was exactly stalling—but she was avoiding over-eating without proper exercise.

CHAPTER XIII

BERYL no longer showed any particular interest in the daily mails. She had asked the postman who delivered at both the store and the house to leave all her mail at the former place to insure it against falling into Irene's hands.

SHE was to appear at the studio the following Tuesday—and this was only Thursday! Her moods began at once to seethe. First, of course, she would scowse Mr. Gaylord—hadn't Mr. Barnhoff said so? Then it was just too good to be true. Such things never happened to her and you didn't have to be a pessimist, either, to feel that way.

AND so it went until Beryl left for New York. She told her mother she felt better and would run over to the store for a little while. That was precisely what she did but there she told her step-father that she was going to the city.

"I'm taking a day off for something important I have to do in New York," she said, "but please don't say anything to Mother or Irene if you can help it."

THERE is no doubt that the will to succeed urged the strain for her but it was the actual possession of an unusual talent that won her sincere praise from those who listened in on her second voice test. And Mr. Gaylord, whose opinion meant most, was most enthusiastic over her singing.

"No one will ever love her out!" he exclaimed, as highly pleased as though he had found her himself. There was even an "I dare you" to contradict his note in his voice which brought a subtle smile to Barnhoff's lips.

"Good news, eh?" the postman laughed. He had known Beryl since childhood and could take liberties with her mail. Having read the name and address that so excited her he was interested to know more about the letter.

"I don't know, Johnny," Beryl replied, rapidly tearing open the envelope.

On Saturday she worked into the store and didn't get her daily swim until after eight o'clock at night. Coming home from the beach she got slightly chilled and began to sneeze. She was worried about it, but she doctored herself well, and on Sunday was as fit as usual.

On Sunday and Monday she cared for herself as though she were already a prima donna and on Tuesday morning she was affected only by suppressed excitement.

From the store she walked to the local railroad station carrying her best pair of shoes—which she had hidden in the store beforehand—to change at the station. The station mistress was an old friend. She would look after the much-scuffed every day sandals until Beryl returned.

That solved the shoe problem but Beryl was forced to go to town in her country clothes. However, she looked attractive. She was slim and tall—taller at any rate than Irene—and her skin looked as though she put it on new every morning. Her gray eyes were difficult of description. Sometimes they were like a sunny day at sea—a blend of sea and sky, clear and sparkling. Sometimes they were smudged with emotion—so that one couldn't say just what shade she was. Her hair was not in itself a crowning glory but it shelled faintly of veronica and Beryl had a style of dressing that was distinctive. In color it was just a plain dark brown. Beryl was rarely ever immaculate as to costume. She was too active and self-forgetful to look for long as though she had just stepped from a fashion plate. But she was fastidious about frequent changes. When she left the house in a freshly laundered gray linen skirt, a matching gray sweater, with dainty lingerie cuffs and collar, no one thought it an out of the ordinary outfit for the store. With gray stockings, a white hat and shoes, she was really well dressed.

Jackie Coogan's Kid Brother in "Skippy"

Jackie Coogan's young brother, five-year-old Robert, makes his debut on the talking screen as the pathetic, ragged Sooky in Paramount's amusing dramatization of Percy Crosby's nationally famous cartoon strip and novel, "Skippy." Bearing a striking resemblance to his brother when Jackie played with Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid," the younger Coogan, still pretty much of a baby, interprets the role of Sooky with a naturalness that is well nigh amazing. For, if you know your "Skippy" cartoons, you'll make the pleasant discovery that the Sooky of Robert Coogan is Percy Crosby's creation come to life.

The title role in "Skippy" is played by little Jackie Cooper, prominent member of the "Our Gang" comedies. As the lovable bad boy who insists on playing with the garbage man's son, much to the dismay of his germ-fearing father, young Cooper is the real thing. As produced on the talking screen "Skippy" emerges as gay, amusing entertainment that will appeal to all kids from six to sixty. And although "Skippy" affords many hearty laughs there are also moments that are deeply moving, particularly Sooky to save the life of Sooky's non-descript mongrel, Penny. Those who have seen "Skippy" in preview are as one in the opinion that in "Skippy" Paramount has an entertainment that is a worthy successor to the widely acclaimed "Tom Sawyer."

HEROES ARE MADE—NOT BORN.

J.R. WILLIAMS

MISS Mary B. Murray's NEW BOOK on SALAD DRESSINGS TO SUIT THE SALADS

"THERE is a right kind of salad for each occasion, and a right kind of dressing for each different kind of salad."

That is nothing new! It is simply that some things go together and some do not. It is as old as flowers in spring, overcoats in winter, going to bed at night and getting up in the morning.

So mix a dressing appropriate to the salad. For the right dressing, mixed to suit the particular flavors of the salad, really decides the success of the salad.

Each different kind of salad has a different flavor. That is why we like them. Then why smother all their flavors under a blanket of thick dressing like mayonnaise? Mix a dressing appropriate to the salad.

In my little booklet I suggest a few salads appropriate for each occasion and the dressings that go best with them. I feel sure you will enjoy it because I have written it just for you. I hope it will help you make all your dinners and parties the charming successful occasions you want them to be. I will send you the booklet with my compliments if you will write me in care of the Wesson Oil People, 210 Baronne St., New Orleans, La.

TOOK CARDUI IN MIDDLE LIFE

Lady Tells How She Suffered From Head Pains and Disturbed Sleep.

"About four years ago, I had a terrible feeling in my head, like a band around it, pressing so tight," says Mrs. T. R. Harbin, of 1138 South Main Street, Anderson, S. C. "I was so dizzy, and felt so bad, I was afraid to leave home for fear I might fall or have a dizzy spell. I knew I must do something. It was change of life (doctor said), and I decided to take Cardui. After my first bottle, I felt better. I had not had any good sleep for weeks (I was so tired), but after the first bottle of Cardui I felt better and slept. I took three or four bottles of Cardui, in all, and am feeling better than in a long time. Cardui certainly is a splendid medicine."

Cardui is a mild, medicinal extract of herbs that are well-known for their corrective influence in simple disorders, suffered by many women, when in need of a good reconstructive tonic.
